Scott Hardin Chief Technical Officer and Founder

Hardin has over 20 years experience in synthesizing customers' needs into products that win. He has built and led product management, marketing and engineering teams in both enterprise and start-up environments. Previously, Scott was founder and President at Camtera, LLC, a marketing and sales automation company that developed mobile and web applications and APIs for B2C retailers. He also founded and was President of Savano, Inc., a B2B lead generation solutions provider where he led the development of a SaaS marketing lead generation and analytics software that he licensed to a leading public online media and vertical marketing company.

Hardin previously held leadership roles in product marketing and engineering teams that developed and delivered scalable, fault tolerant software for the telecommunication industry as a founder in both a venture-backed start-up and at business unit leader at Fortune 500 companies. In these roles, he synthesized customer requirements to help drive product definition, led $40MM businesses that developed and delivered of market leading products. He earned a BS in Electrical Engineering from the University of Kentucky, and an MBA from Georgia State University.

Scott is passionate about bringing his high-tech expertise to the healthcare industry, and fervently believes that start-up businesses like this one that give patients access to better health care and reduce caregivers workload are key to improving healthcare quality and efficiency.
